Addressing Foreign Minister Grey, the speaker said: "Will President Taft submit the Monroe doctrine and the proposed arbitration treaty to the House of Commons? I can only say that I am not prepared to raise hypothetical questions until the treaty is submitted to the House of Commons. I can only say that I am not prepared to raise hypothetical questions until the treaty is submitted to the House of Commons. # HAGERTY TELLS WHY HE KILLED HIS THREE MOTHERLESS CHILDREN wanted them well cared for. At the moment was by. But the longing to have his children with him grew stronger and stronger. He was frequently thrown in contact. At length he promised to marry him and to make a home for his children.

Then suddenly the woman by whom he was employed died and he was thrown out of work. But he was certain that he would find employment, and certainly, too, that he would be permitted to see his wife. With his savings he furnished the flat at No. 101 Calumet street and brought his children to it. They would soon have a new mother, he told them; one who would be as good to them as the mother of the little girls they carried in the neighborhood.

Poverty at the Door.

Still, such as he might, he could get no employment. The savings dwindled, and the good clothes in which he had been so proud to dress his babies began to grow shabby. He did not spend as much for food as he had at the first home-coming, but he had no choice, and there was always hope in his heart that the work he sought would soon turn up. And when he got the new mother would come to them.

Then, as the days passed, it got to be a question of protecting his own meals if the children were to eat. In his mind he knew that he could not feed the children from his own store. He was a comfort to him of their faces were looking their hunger and need. He said so word of his trouble to the neighbors because of his wife, although he knew they were many who would be glad to aid. He became more and more, and the children were still as he still had a smile for the children. But worry stood out in his eyes and he passed his old friends by without speaking.

One day there was nothing to eat in the house, and the children cried. The mother was not in the street, the neighbors saw, and then Margaret, the eldest, urged by the mother, turned to the neighbors and asked for the piece of bread she was eating. The child began to cry, and his mother ran out to chastise the larger girl, but when she saw the children's faces, she took her bread and fed her youngest.

Saw Madness in His Eyes.

No other term became public and Hagerty's brain, tense with the long and arduous work, snapped. He saw madness in his eyes, as the thought of what he considered his shame. There was no sound from the Hagerty flat just next door to the one in which Margaret lived, who then in the apartment house, thought she heard

We Are New England Headquarters for the Popular Redfern Corsets

The Redfern is a corset for the fashionable dresser—designed always a little in advance of established fashions, giving, therefore, the perfect foundation for the new gown or suit, made with the greatest possible accuracy and exactness, trimmed with exquisite daintiness.

The up-to-date figure, if possible, is in effect longer and slimmer than ever, requiring a very long, smooth-fitting corset like the Redfern, which is boned with the finest Arctic Whalebone throughout. No satisfactory substitute has yet been found for whalebone, and the Redfern Whalebone Models stand, as they have always stood, unexcelled for resiliency and shaping power.

of Clothing Values in Boston

Being obliged to give up our present location by the big deal through which the Filene Company will erect a gigantic Department Store, on this site, we received an enormous cash bonus to vacate.

THE amount of this bonus we are pledged to keep secret, but it is so large that we can offer every garment of the vast stocks now on hand at far below actual cost with only small loss to us. We shall not transfer a single garment to our new location, WHICH WILL BE ANNOUNCED LATER. Everything must be sold at a phenomenal sacrifice.

Just think what that means, at the very opening of the season with thousands and thousands of garments here to choose from. Everything included—Spring and Summer Suits and Spring Gowns, including the new English models, Walking, Prince Albert, Dress and Tuxedo Suits, that regularly range from $10 to $15.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK OPENING STATE ST. NEWS

IS IRREGULAR FOR INVESTORS

BANGOR, Me., May 4.—Bangor's fund for the relief of her fire victims has reached $21,000, which the authorities believe will be ample. Only about seventy families are in need of aid.

Military patrols are still on duty, with the regular and many special police, but there is little to do except keep the crowd out of the dangerous ruins. There has been no crime since the fire and only two arrests for drunkenness were made in the past twenty-four hours.

Specialists on the floor of the Stock Exchange say there are numerous buying orders under the market, mostly in the railroad stocks and largely on a scale down. In some cases they come from very important sources, but the public is represented as well. There is an increased demand for both Erie and Atchafalaya. Buying of odd lots is going on all the time.

The fire is now estimated at 100,000 tons. This large blaze, with ample local material, will be used in rebuilding on a much improved basis. The new plant will be a 100,000-ton, four-lane, one-story and more spacious structure than ever before. Building operations are well advanced and the new plant will be ready to receive the first load of material in a few days. The plant and site are believed to be safe. Telegraph and local telephone service is being restored. The local telephone service has only one street car line running through the plant. The plant is being cleared and within a few days there will be plenty of work for a considerable number of men. The building firm will enter upon a long period of construction. The plant is being built on a great main road, had the fire occurred on a main road, would have required some time to get the material.

When the Stanley resolution for an investigation of the Steel Trust in its relations with labor supporters was favorably reported in Congress, the entire market braced up. This investigation of the Steel Trust was expected to make public the result of the investigation made by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and it was known privately that this investigation has resulted in complete vindication of the trust, both as to its relations with labor and to its financial affairs. Official announcement of this will reassure shareholders all over the world. The Department of Commerce and Labor has no bullion influence by making it plain to the public that the Steel Trust enjoys good relations with labor, that it has the best superior equipment, ownership of raw material, banking connections and alliances with railroads.

Speaker Walker to-day offered in the House of Representatives a resolve providing for an amendment of the State constitution which will permit the levying of a State income tax. The resolve provides, in effect, that the Legislature shall have authority to levy a tax upon all incomes, from whatever source derived, and upon property which is or is not subject to taxation.

Concerning his resolve Speaker Walker gave out the following statement:

"I have introduced to-day resolves looking to an amendment of the Constitution of Massachusetts which will make it possible to lay in Massachusetts a real income tax on all incomes. In am in earnest about this matter. Such an income tax should be laid at the earliest possible moment and should be so laid that it can be paid in full at once. I am a firm believer in the income tax, but believe that the proceeds of such tax should go to the Commonwealth and to her cities and towns and not into the plebeian national treasury. I am a firm believer in the income tax, but I stand for a real State income tax until such tax is written on the statute books of Massachusetts."

In THIS Generation Women Will Vote

The Better Half of Humanity Will Make the Laws That Control—and the Laws Will Be Better

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Kramer)

It is to be hoped that those interested in securing woman suffrage will do something to kill off the notion that women should be kept permanently on a level with cows, sheep, idiots and other creatures that have no share in government or the making of laws.

It seems as preposterous to discuss the right of women to vote as it would be to discuss their right to breathe.

However, in our state of civilization, a majority, or at least a large minority, believe that the mothers that created men should be deprived of the ballot that is given to every man, however drunken or otherwise worthless—therefore, argument is necessary.

It is objected that female suffrage would give votes "to the women of the streets."

Why not? That vote at least would help them to punish the men that put them on the streets. All of those men have votes. You may be certain that the most miserable women would vote for the best men, for they know too well about bad men.

It is said that female suffrage would increase "the ignorant vote," adding to the number of voters without knowledge of history, and lacking in other ingredients supposed to be necessary in a voter.

What of it? The ignorant voters do as much for progress as the intelligent voters. For the ignorant voter does not comprehend or listen to sophistry, and accepts only results. The most ignorant woman would know enough to vote against hard times, high prices, dirty streets, inferior schools and dishonest officials. The ignorant woman's vote would be found punishing the corrupt officeholder, the incompetent, inefficient political party. The more ignorant votes of that kind, the better.

If a man opposes votes for women it would be well to ask him some questions.

What is the chief thing in a voter? Is it not honesty, good character? Are not women honest?

Intelligence is important in a voter, receptivity, willingness to receive new ideas. Are not the women at least as intelligent and receptive as the men in this country?

If a man opposes votes for women, ask him what quality essential in a voter was lacking in his own mother, and tell him that the person most unfit to vote is the man that would not give a vote to his own mother, or to any mother.

It is alleged that women voting would be too much under the influence of religious teachers—this has been absolutely disproved in New Zealand, as every one might have known that it would be.

It is said by one class of men that women would be "bigoted," close up all the saloons and dry up the springs of fertility. This, too, has been disproved in New Zealand.

Women should vote, and they will use their vote, because the day is come at last when men are willing to admit that the better side of human nature should be the controlling force in government—and woman morally is the better side of the human race.

If the individual would be ashamed not to allow in his mental activity any share of power to the better side of his nature, should not humanity be ashamed to refuse in the decisions and the deliberations of government a full share to woman, the better, the moral half of the human race?

A Man Who Actually MAKES Money

He Makes It Grow Out of the Ground, Creates Wealth Where There Was None. J. H. Hale Is a First-Class American Citizen

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Kramer)

Governor Baldwin of Connecticut has appointed J. H. Hale a railroad commissioner for the State—and no appointment could be better. What Hale has done for himself and for this country is an example and a lesson for hundreds of thousands who wonder what to do, and how to be useful.

First, J. H. Hale had no start in life—so that no man can say HE also MIGHT do something if he had A START.

Hale had no start, except a good brain and willingness to work. He left school when he was eleven, and never went back. While others were getting education HE was getting INFORMATION and developing character through hard work and thought.

He worked on a farm for twelve dollars and a half a month not so long ago.

That is not what you would call a very glorious start. No one left him money or gave him money or helped him. He made his own start. He worked at the earth, and THOUGHT AS HE WORKED. Each day his hands did a day's work, and his MIND did a day's work also.

He began with nothing. Now he cultivates thousands of acres, and his cultivation is of the best and most successful. He has taken lands in Georgia and in Connecticut that were considered worthless and has made them yield annually hundreds of dollars to the acre. He has taken lands abandoned by farmers in Connecticut, and from the stony ground he has produced magnificent crops of apples and peaches—apples equal to the best brought from the West. He has shown that in the East there are fruit lands to be bought cheap and made as valuable as the famous fruit areas that sell for fabulous prices in the West.

Every year J. H. Hale produces and GIVES TO THE PEOPLE THROUGH THE NATION'S MARKETS hundreds of thousands of baskets and crates of apples and peaches.

This is a man to be honored, one who really CREATES WEALTH, who literally MAKES money—for he makes it out of the soil.

He adds each year hundreds of thousands to the country's wealth. The men working under him are all PRODUCERS, not a drone or wasted man among them.

He teaches his fellow men how to be happy, busy, prosperous and useful, all at the same time—and for that teaching every man yearns.

We ask our readers to think about this particular man and his success.

No schooling after eleven.

No favors, no help, no special chance.

And a very big success, made by his own brain and willingness to work.

That is the right kind of a man to select for railroad commissioner, or for any other important work.

Household Poetry

By MORTON BIRGE

"There is poetry in household work"—Kata Douglas Wiggins.

G O home and say lightly and free to friend wife:
"There's poetry in housework—a beautiful rhyme:
Then listen to wife. Friend wife, say she:
"Now John Henry Husband, you hear to me?"

"I dashed off a stanza of breakfast for you.
I wrote a few sonnets with duster and broom,
Then during the morning I also found rhyme.
To mix up a couple of verses and bake
A madrigal pie and an epic of cake,
I ran off a neat little metrical lunch
And then felt a sort of poetical hunch
'Twas time to compose—that is, mending I mean—
So did a few staves on the sewing machine.
I trotted around with a rush and a rhyme,
The day was merrily done and I barely had time
To get up your dinner—Maybe, as you say,
My work is one lifting and blithe roundelay,
But all the real rhythm that's yet come to pass
Is found in the metre that measures the gas."

Why the Widow Is an A-1 Marriage Risk

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN, who evidently entertains the opinion of the late Mr. Walter regarding widows, writes me that he tried, a man of fifty, has fallen very much in love with an attractive widow of a suitable age and wants to marry her.

My correspondent says that the lady is amiable to every way, only he wishes she wasn't a widow, and he wonders if his friend wouldn't have a better chance of success if he would marry a woman who had never been married before.

Well, then, you don't know a good thing when you see one. Widows are the preferred matrimonial risk among woman-kind, and the men who get them draw the capital prizes in wedlock.

There are many good reasons why a widow is likely to make a better wife than a woman who has never been married. To begin with, she has the best matrimonial advantage, at the very start, of the professional over the amateur in matrimony. She has cut widows' teeth, so to speak, and No. 2 reaps the benefit.

For instance, to commence at the very foundation stone of domestic peace and happiness, the widow knows how to cook and keep house, whereas the young girl who is an ignorant blunderer, who wastes a man's money and sets him down, for the first few or two years of married life, to disasters of watery potatoes and burnt meat, and pies that would give an expert satirist.

Men who marry beautiful little ingenuities do not know what risks they run to their digestion, or there would be some bold enough to try it. The man who marries a widow wisely sidesteps this danger.

Another advantage that the widow has over the unsuited woman as a wife is that she is not a child. The young girl thinks that men are either demigods or brutes. The widow knows that they are neither. She knows that they are great, big, stowaway babies, that have to be petted and flattered, and fed on sugar plums, spanked when they need it.

Not for nothing did the widow live with her dear departed John. She obtained from him a rule of thumb by which she can work any man.

She knows that the best man in the world has his corners that a sensible wife keeps away from, and his little weaknesses that a sensible wife keeps away from.

She has learned what her rights are, and his privileges, and she's gotten, we should say, the one and grant the other without argument.

She takes the man as she finds him. If he wants to go out of evenings who is a willing and jolly companion; but if he wants to stay at home and read the newspapers she joins him in stippled ease across the reading lamp.

Then, too, the widow knows enough not to expect too much of men. The woman who has never been married before expects a man's virtues and his faults, she doesn't give it a second thought. She just picks up her little tin and dusts it off and sticks it back in its closet.

The woman who has never been married before demands that her husband shall be perfection, and when she finds that he isn't she judges him too harshly. The widow has learned from experience to average a man's virtues and his faults, she doesn't make a balance that leans to mercy's side.

There is but one objection to the widow as a wife. Having her is always the shadow of her lost husband; but, in view of the untold good men who might well overlook this ghastly rival.

All that tread
The globe are but a handful to the tribes
That slumber in its bosom.

THE GLOBE ARE BUT A HANDFUL TO THE TRIBES
THAT SLUMBER IN ITS BOSOM.
